

Restorative Practices Conferencing Online Workshop

13 & 14 July 2021

Highly Interactive & Practical Session

Course Overview

Restorative Conferencing is a structure which allows for the management of an incident (conflict). It provides those who have been affected by an incident to be part of the resolution.

Conferences are gaining significant prominence in Singapore having been adopted by the State Courts, mediation centers, community resolution centers and schools. It is a communitarian response based on collective accountability that builds social capital and brings values to youth and children.

Key Focus of Restorative Conferencing:

- Holding wrongdoers accountable in a meaningful way to address the needs of those affected and to reduce recidivism and reoffending;
- Broadening responses to wrongdoing by repairing relationships and reconnecting people to their communities;
- Encouraging communities to move away from systems that do not produce the outcomes desired.

Learning Outcomes:

- Learn Restorative Practices Principles, Values and Skills;
- Understand the different types of Conferences;
 - Small Group Conference
 - Wrong Doer - Victim Conference
 - Family Group Conference
 - Community Group Conference
- Acquire knowledge and skills to plan and conduct a Conference;
- Ways to engage stakeholders, parents and the community
- Understand Affect Theory and Reintegration Theory that underlie the Conferencing Process.

 Prior knowledge of Restorative Practices would be required to participate & appreciate the training.

Restorative Community Conferences have gaining world-wide support and attention as an effective way to manage and repair the harm caused by crime, mistakes and wrongdoing in our schools, community and workplaces. These conferences bring together the community and put in place safeguards for the future allowing people to have closure and move on.

Reflections about our community when things go wrong -

- ✓How can we engage the community in meaningful dialogue and learning concrete lessons about social responsibility.
- ✓How can we assist people to be thoughtful and reflective about their behaviour and reduce anti social behaviour.
- ✓How can we teach emotional intelligence and social competencies in real settings?
- ✓How can we reduce the stress and responsibility felt by managers and workers when addressing wrongdoing and build partnerships across their organization.
- ✓How can we provide meaningful ways for people to develop self-discipline and to “own their behaviour”.

Restorative Practices (RP) Conference Case Study in a Secondary School

Parents withdrew a student from school after she had been repeatedly physically bullied by another student. Parents of the victim wanted the wrongdoer to be removed from school. They also made a police report.

A RP Conference was called by the school (with parents from both students present). During the conference it emerged that the victim often provoked the offender by acting in a silly manner. As a result of the conference, the wrongdoer agreed to stop her aggression and the bullied student agreed to stop her provocative behaviour.

Parents involved had a better understanding of what had happened and who were affected. Parents withdrew their police complaint and both students are back in school. Though not friends, they have learned to respect boundaries of each other.
